

Vita:

Werner Ruppricht (born 1962) studied Surface Engineering and Material Science at the University of Applied Science in Aalen. 1990 he starts his career as a project engineer at the central research department of the HOECHST AG. Beginning at 1993 he worked as an Application Engineer and later as a Sales Engineer in the Membrane Department (the later MICRODYN-NADIR) in the field of water and wastewater in the company. In his present position as a Senior Sales Director of MICRODYN-NADIR he is responsible for municipal water and wastewater treatment. At the Germany Society for Membrane Technology (DGMT) he is Head of the Working Group Micropollutants and member of the Advisory Board.